Times Have Changed

"Railroad workers, as well as stockholders, shippers, and consumers, should demand a revised Federal policy all along the line to eliminate discrimination and other governmental burdens retarding the potential progress of rail transport," says the San Antonio Express.

"What hurts most is the fact that the Federal transportation bill still operates largely on the basis of the old, outmoded roads have a virtual monopoly and that other forms of transport need a helping hand to stay in the race. Technological advance has outstripped that concept, but the government keeps its heavy hand on the rails in the close competition which has developed."

The Parsons, Kansas, Sun, expressed the same idea when it said: "Not until the country adopts an overall transportation policy that treats all types of carriers equally and fairly will the railroad problem be solved."

A great many other newspapers have been saying much the same thing. There can be no question but that our government policy of regulating transportation is obsolete. It is based on assumptions that are no longer valid, and have not been valid for many years. A very large part of the railroad's passenger and freight service must be sold in direct competition with other carriers—with planes, trucks, buses and the privately-owned automobile. Yet the railroads' must pay their own way in every particular, while all their commercial competitors are publicly subsidized in one fashion or another. A new transportation policy, based solely on the facts as they now exist, is the only solution to a problem of the greatest public importance.

Next week more news will be given about the cars and the progress of the rehearsals.

Another six weeks is about over, and only three more remain in the 1949-1950 school year. That means not too many more hours of rigorous studying, but to re-learn that those happy days without study aren't here yet.

modern home. Whether she realizes it or not, the "little woman" often is in the position of superintendent or even chief engineer of a mechanical center.

For the family's welfare, comfort and safety, she may need to know more about electricity, plumbing, heating and other household equipment than her husband.

The hand that rocks the cradle now runs washing machine, dishwasher, vacuum cleaner, sewing machine, and an increasing number of other mechanical devices. Whether she uses them to best advantage and keeps them in condition depends considerably on her understanding of how they work.

Her mechanical knowledge also can help in buying home equipment. In emergencies she may be called on to make simple repairs, such as changing an electric fuse, patching an electric cord or plug, or opening a clogged sink drain.

Though manufacturers have done much toward making modern household equipment automatic and "foolproof," the mechanically-minded housewife still has it at an advantage in her establishment and in running her economy.

Cinematic Chatter

One of the most delightful comedies this writer has seen through in a long time will be screened at the Hugo Theatre, this Sunday-Monday, and it is expected there will be roars of laughter floating out of the doors throughout this showing.

This comedy is "Yes Sir, Mr. Mayor," and it is his for it's stars Donald O'Connor, Gloria DeHaven and Charles Coburn, who are a trio of reformed players, well known, and some of the most beautiful girls on the screen, he is just surprised to find in a picture of this nature.

The picture is the worst tale of college football players who happen to be "pappas" under the microscope of the camera, who also is a student in the

for the eleven-day fair period. The traveling trophy can only be kept for three years by the same person; although, Markham will receive a miniature to keep after the large 30 inch high award moves on. With firm set jaw, he expressed determination to defend it next year.

Probably stung more than any man in the state, Markham has become immune to the bee's spite since entering the business commercially during the war years. Although he had some hives previously, not until the good price of honey caused by war time sugar shortages did he start on his present large scale.

Now Markham maintains approximately 500 hives over the state. Gathering the surplus honey, he canvasses the hives. After honey is brought in, in supers, the boxes honey combs are made in, refinement process in his well equipped honey house on 41 S.W. Avenue begins. A family affair, his two children assist in the honey house after school. Extraction and filtering of the amber liquid raises with their "A, B, C's."

Markham only packs as he receives either wholesale or private orders. Most of his business now is with wholesalers in Miami St. Petersburg.

Last year he sold 75,000 pounds to the government for the school lunch program. Honey quality depends on the flower from which the nectar comes, Markham says. Different flowers produce individual flavors and colors.

He has both orange blossom and thistle honey, although he says that the latter, which is only obtained in Palm Beach County, is the rarest. Under his careful grading process, the darker stronger honey is sold for baking purposes while the lighter milder honey is produced for table use.

Commenting on his breed winners, Markham says, "bees have a type of sociological community." They all have special tasks which depend upon their ages. For instance, bees under two weeks of age confine their duties to inside the hive. Later, they work the field gathering nectar. In old age they become guards.

Following the jungle's law of the survival of the fittest, bees kill off their old which they are no longer useful. "Bees are very interesting to watch," says Markham, "and humans could draw a valuable lesson from them." "If we humans could organize ourselves together as the bees do, we might have a more peaceful world."

LOANS AVAILABLE
redevelopment, essentially means replacing city areas which are not too popular to live or work in. "Until recently city planning was a matter of local concern," Dr. Hauser says, but under the new housing act and its provisions for slum clearance and redevelopment the matter now becomes one of national concern.

"From now on the federal government is prepared to join with state and city governments in work on community planning," he says. What can be gained, what lost by this change? are questions Dr. Hauser puts to the reader in this latest bulletin to extend his discussion on community planning and the new national policy, in order to "help the reader form an independent opinion."

Dr. Hauser in Part I discusses the main features of federal legislation; the two kinds of federal loans available under the law; the federal land policy; and some history behind enactment of the Housing Act of 1949.

Under "main features" he says the act fulfills the hopes of those state legislators who hoped the federal government would come forth with loans to cities. Dr. Hauser also says that another feature provides that municipal governments, or special agencies operating under their control would receive loans and grants only if they engage actively in city planning and if they are in a position to carry a share of the cost of redevelopment.

Also important in order to qualify for the loans, clearance plans made by local government.

ments must not result in a speaker system with the popular soft music being transmitted by telephone wire. Inter-building communication will be facilitated by two exhibitors employing different systems.

No expense has been spared in exhibiting and Exposition officials to make the 1950 show the largest and most interesting ever staged in the area.

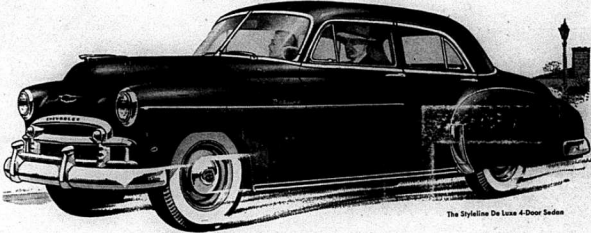

Applications for entry of exhibits have been received from 28 States, but under the present policy, only concerns strictly classified as Palm Beach County are included; other than educational or entertainment features.

Landscaping of the area is proceeding rapidly around the buildings. In addition to the normal beautifications, several leading concerns are cooperating to produce an area between the Everglades Building and the Trade Mart that will include a deluxe outdoor patio, with planted lawn of various types, grasses backed up by shrubbery and trees by nursery growers.

Following the preview March 3rd the doors of the Exposition will remain open from 1 to 10 p.m. daily and Sunday through March 15th.

Exposition officials are confident that the estimated attendance of 30,000 will be surpassed this year.

Read your policy

Your insurance policy is a contract between you and the company. It specifically states the hazards against which you are insured and the exceptions which the policy does not cover. Exceptions are put into the contract because, were the company to include these excepted hazards, the cost of such insurance would be prohibitive. You should have a clear conception of your contract so that you know exactly what coverage you have, to avoid any possibility of your suffering an uninsured loss. If there are any parts of your insurance policy which you do not understand we would be pleased to explain them to you. Call us at any time.

Clemans Take Parents For Weekend Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad S. Clemans took his parents, who are spending the winter with them, on an interesting week end trip down the lower east coast recently.

They toured the Fairchild Gardens where they were shown many interesting rare plants and trees from many lands. They visited Coral Gables and the University of Miami, motored up Miami Beach to Golden Beach and on to Fort Lauderdale where they took the Freestone Cruise.

Back to the Glades, they visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. Heitzman in Lake Worth.

They are planning a tour through the orange belt visit to Bok Tower, Cypress Gardens, and other points of interest soon.

Reverend Oswald came to South Bay from Bonifay where he was pastor of the Baptist Church. During his pastorate in South Bay a $6000.00 parsonage was built and is free of debt. Reverend Oswald, his wife, and son Charles occupied this parsonage during the last years of their work in South Bay.

The congregation is planning to erect a new edifice to take the place of the one they have outgrown. A committee has been formed to secure a location for the new church and a financial committee to make arrangements for a building fund.

The church has just ended a three weeks revival under the direction of the pastor, Reverend R. F. Hallford of Dothan, Alabama, was the visiting evangelist and is remaining for a few weeks until the church can secure a regular pastor.

Reverend B. A. Oswald, pastor of the South Bay Baptist Church for the last four years, has accepted a pastorate at the
